STATE POLICE "DOG" TRAIL OF MURDERER OF OLD TIM DAY

Officers Know Much About Murder Already, It Is Reported

HINT OF HEXERAI

Officers Discount Theory;
Body Was Found By A School Boy

WILLIAMSPORT, Nov. 21.—(INS)—Through the wild hills north of here Pennsylvania State Police still are dogging the trail of the man who murdered old Tim Day in his isolated farm home.

Like the Royal Mounted of the cold Northwest officers of the picturesque State Constabulary will never rest until they have "got their man." Already they know a great deal about him.

They know what kind of a gun he used when he crept up with stealthy tread the evening of March 29 to take deliberate aim and speed a bullet into the head of the aged recluse as he sat, framed in a kitchen window, reading his daily paper.

They know there's a motive more sinister than robbery. For the man who fired the fatal shot never crossed the threshold of the home of the dead Tim Day.

There's a dark hint of hexerei, although the gray-garbed officers discount this theory. But among the scattered neighbors of Day who till rocky mountain farms old superstitions still hold sway.

It was young William Wright, a farm boy who attends high school in the village of Liberty a dozen miles away, who discovered the murder of Tim Day. Young Wright all last winter tended a trap line for fur-bearing animals and at least once each day passed near the old man's home.

It was on a Thursday morning that young William Wright last saw the recluse alive. On the following Friday and Saturday, according to the story he told police, there was no sign of the old man and no smoke curled from the chimney.

Sunday morning, having more time than on school days, young Wright went to the home to investigate.

On the floor of the kitchen he found Tim Day dead at the foot of his chair. Crumpled in his rigid hands was a newspaper he had been reading when death struck unexpectedly.

The paper in Tim Day's dead hands established the time of his death. The hole in the window and the bullet in his head told how he had died. But there were no clues to tell why or by whom he had been shot down as he sat peacefully reading after completing his day's work.

The police know that the silent hills hold many secrets. Who murdered old Tim Day is one of them.

But some time, somewhere, always unrelenting they believe they will "get their man."

TAX LEAGUE MEETS

The Pennsylvania Tax Justice League of Bucks County, Bensalem Division, held its regular meeting at the M. E. social hall, Thursday evening. The road committee gave a report of activities, and the school committee also gave report on its activities. Election of officers took place. Edward G. Katzmar, Torrence Manor, was elected as president; Harry Hughes, Cornwells, vice president; Raymond Wink, secretary; Henry Heacock, Eddington, assistant secretary; Mrs. T. Briscoe, treasurer. Mr. Katzmar appointed committees to serve for the year. Each of the newly elected officers gave a short speech.

P. T. A. COUNCIL REPORT HEARD AT ANDALUSIA

Program Presented by Pupils
Under the Direction of Miss M. Pyle

BUSINESS IS CONDUCTED

ANDALUSIA, Nov. 21.—The monthly meeting of Andalusia Parent-Teacher Association was held Monday evening at the school house. H. Bowers Peters opened the meeting, and the minutes were read by Miss May Early. Mrs. Gilbert, Mrs. Blasch, Mrs. Lange, Mrs. F. Rossbauer and Mr. Peters gave reports on the Bucks County Council meeting at Jamison.

Leroy Swan, Andalusia school, it was announced, won the poster prize at the council.

The December meeting will be dispensed with, due to the Christmas holidays.

A motion was made to contribute five dollars to the Christmas opera which is given each year by pupils of Andalusia school.

Mr. Peters discussed the possibility of getting more books for the school library. Suggestions for raising money for such were discussed. There will be a box placed in the room and members are requested to drop a coin into the box on meeting nights to raise library funds, in addition to the contribution donated from the treasury.

The attendance banner was awarded to Miss Pyle's room. Edward G. Katzmar, vice-president, and chairman of the membership committee, reported 70 members to date.

A motion was passed to sponsor the Andalusia Boy Scout Troop for the coming year.

Miss Pyle's class presented the program of the evening. The class sang the National P. T. A. song, with members joining in the second chorus.

Folk dances were presented by some of the children. Participants were: Cecilia Juliff, William Gilbert, Daniel Gallagher, Virginia Oliver, George Geiges, Ruth Wendkos, James De Gaur, Catherine Preas, Dick Barnhill, Catherine Ferguson, Robert Waites and Elaine Jackson. The dances were "Howdy-Do, My Partner," Danish Greeting, and Shoemaker's Dance.

PREDICTS AN AVERAGE WINTER

By James C. Kinkaid

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 21.—(INS)—Unless you enjoy cold weather you may just as well get ready for a jaunt to Florida or California for the next few months.

Because this is going to be an "average" winter, according to W. S. Brotzman, chief of the local weather bureau. That is what he told International News Service today in an exclusive interview.

What is average? According to the meteorologist, an average winter is a cold one with a few days of sub-zero temperatures thrown in by Mother Nature to keep the records balanced.

He hastened to add, however: "There's not a man alive who can tell you whether this winter will be colder than last year. No one can predict what the weather will be more than a few days ahead. It is impossible to predict what the weather will be more than two or three days ahead, with absolute accuracy. Even forecasting 24 hours ahead is a difficult task at times."

This is due, he explained, to the irregular paths over which high and low pressure areas move. Some of these high and low pressure zones will move thousands of miles in 24 hours while others will remain stationary for days at a time. And the rapidity with which these areas move and the directions they take all have a direct bearing on what the weather will be in any particular section. The "weather-men," however, average about 85 percent of perfect in their prognostications, he added.

Last year's sub-normal temperatures were due, he said, to storms which swept across Canada, and, when apparently headed toward the St. Lawrence valley, suddenly veered southward into the United States.

"No man could predict a week ahead of time what those disturbances would do," he said.

FIND SMALL SKETCH OF PENN'S ORIGINAL MANOR

Such Solves Difficult Problem
For Penna. Historical Commission

WILL BE GREAT AID

Discovery of a tiny sketch showing the front of William Penn's original home at Pennsbury Manor has solved a difficult problem for the Pennsylvania Historical Commission. Penn built his house on the banks of the Delaware, about five miles above Bristol, more than 250 years ago, but historians, archaeologists and architects were baffled when a rebuilding project was proposed, for no drawings or sketches of the manor house could be found.

Dr. Albert Cook Myers, Philadelphia, secretary of the Commission, has advised Dr. James N. Rule, Superintendent of Public Instruction and chairman of the Commission, that he has found among his personal collections of Penn materials a crude contemporary manuscript drawing of the front of the original Pennsbury house. It appears on an old map among some of William Penn's possessions. The drawing is only about two inches in length. Nevertheless, it is claimed that this and other data found among Penn's effects will be most valuable in reconstruction of the colonial building which was in ruins before the Revolutionary War.

Other particulars which will be useful in the eventual restoration of the old house were found by Dr. Myers, most of them in the handwriting of William Penn himself. These gave information about the chimneys, wainscoting, brick work, the heights of the ceilings, the sizes of doors, windows and stairs; inventories of the contents of the house by rooms, also of the other buildings which composed the manor; references to the gardens, courtyards, hedges, gates, fences, steps, paths, orchards and the well.

This information added to that already found through careful excavations under the direction of Donald A. Cadzow, archaeologist for the Commission, will be of material aid in preparing for an authentic reconstruction of Pennsbury Manor.

3 CHILDREN BURN TO DEATH

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 21.—Three children were burned to death and their mother suffered a fractured leg and burns when she jumped from a second-story window in rescuing a fourth child from the fire of undetermined origin, at the home of Child Smith, 5; Eugene, 4; and Leonard, 10 weeks. Mrs. Hilda Smith, who with her husband was awakened by the blaze, leaped with her son Charles, 2, from a second story window. Meanwhile her husband rushed from the house to spread the news.

Librarian at Yardley Gives Report for October

YARLEY, Nov. 21.—The regular monthly meeting of the Yardley Library board was held in the library, with the librarian reporting 944 books in circulation for the month of October. This is the largest October circulation on record for the library.

During book week the following hobbies were displayed: Model of a large fishing boat made by Chester Lear, Jr., which contained 963 pieces of wood, 1380 nails, and took 102 hours to complete. It was built in December 1931. He also made a model of the "Morro Castle" and a lighthouse which was electrically lighted.

Other displays were: moth and butterfly collections by George Williams; match box collection by George Williams and Robert Bebbington; and photography by Frederick Bebbington.

DEMOCRATS PARADE IN VICTORY CELEBRATION

Flags, Red Fire and Fire Apparatus Add Color To The Demonstration

DECORATED AUTOS TOO

Jubilant Democrats of Bristol and various other districts in Bucks County paraded through the streets here last night in a victory celebration.

The paraders were afoot, on horseback and in motor cars. Red fire and transparencies with pithy slogans added color to the line.

The parade was nearly an hour late in getting underway and did not start until nine o'clock. It took 20 minutes for the line to pass a given point.

There were a number of decorated autos and trucks in line and men and women carried flags, banners and red fire. Reproductions of the Democratic donkey and G. O. P. elephant were numerous. Bristol Volunteer fire companies No. 1, 2 and 3 with their apparatus comprised the third and last division of the line. Visiting delegations formed the first division with representatives from the six wards of Bristol comprising the second section.

Those active in Democratic activities in Bucks County marched at the head of the procession.

The parade started at nine o'clock and marched for two hours.

A large crowd of people came into Bristol to witness the demonstration and crowded the sidewalks in the central section.

BUTLER READY TO TELL MORE

Newtown Square, Nov. 21.—Major General Smedley D. Butler is prepared to go again before the Congressional Committee investigating un-American activities and testify further regarding his charges that he declined an offer to head an army of 500,000 ex-service men in a coup to overthrow the government and set up a dictatorship.

The retired Marine commander so declared today in telling International News Service: "It depends entirely on the committee. If I am subpoenaed I will go back."

Reached at his home here General Butler adamantly refused to discuss the testimony he gave before the Dickstein Committee in executive session in New York yesterday.

"I said what I had to say before the Congressional Investigating Committee," he asserted. "I am not going to say anything more about the matter as I agreed with the committee not to disclose my testimony and I am not going to break that agreement."

MACQUIRE ON HOT SPOT

New York City, Nov. 21.—Placed squarely on the hot-spot by General Smedley D. Butler by his astounding testimony, Gerald P. Macquire, an embarrassed young bond salesman was to appear before the Dickstein Committee today to repeat his denials that he ever urged Butler to march on Washington with a "Fascist" army. Named by the fiery marine corps veteran as the intermediary in a plot of Wall Street interests to overthrow President Roosevelt with a force of 500,000 ex-service men, Macquire was to be examined on a number of circumstantial details contained in Butler's charges and despite the mirth, sarcasm and explosive indignations, with which the charges were denied by various eminent officials named in the conspiracy, the Congressional Committee on un-American activities intends to "sift the matter to the bottom."

Congressman Samuel Dickstein, vice-chairman of the committee said: "From present indications, Butler has the evidence. He is not going to make any serious charges unless he has something to back them up. We will have men here with bigger names than his."

Dickstein said further that about 16 persons mentioned by General Butler, would be subpoenaed and that a public hearing might be held next Monday.

GUILD AT EDGELY DISPLAYS A TOTAL OF 1250 ARTICLES

Two New Directors Added To List at Annual Exhibit
At Hawkes Home

SIXTY IN ATTENDANCE

R. C. Flanders, Superintendent of Northern Home for Children, Phila., Speaks

EDGELY, Nov. 21.—The eighth annual ingathering and exhibition of garments by the Edgely Branch, Needlework Guild of America, was held at the home of Mrs. Thomas G. Hawkes, yesterday afternoon. There were about 60 women in attendance, and all expressed surprise at the number of beautiful garments so pleasingly arranged on the spacious sun-porch.

The members of the Edgely Guild have worked earnestly to provide the type of clothing most in demand and to outfit the children of school age, as well as the men and women, who go out to work. The collection consists of warm undergarments, night-wear, stockings and many girls' dresses; and added to the list this year hand-knit sweaters of which the Edgely Guild is very proud.

The total garments displayed to date are 1250. The sewing committees reported making 500. Two new directors were added to the list this year, Mrs. George Lefferts and Mrs. Edward Walsh.

Mrs. Walter G. Stillwell presided and called for reports of the secretary, Mrs. William O'Dea, and treasurer, Mrs. Herbert Banes.

Mrs. Stillwell extended a cordial welcome to members and their friends, and to the friends from visiting guilds. She extended to Mrs. Roland Quinn, in behalf of the Guild, her appreciation for untiring efforts as official cutter, having cut garments for the past seven years; to Mrs. Burd Fowler, Philadelphia, for untiring interest and many donations to the Guild; to Mrs. Hawkes, for her kindnesses to each member and aid at all times, and the use of her home for the weekly meetings and card parties.

Mrs. Stillwell introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Robert C. Flanders, superintendent of the Northern Home for Friendless Children, Philadelphia. Mr. Flanders thanked the guild for donations made each year. He told that guild contributions of clothing have aided the home greatly. At the present time there are 125 children at the home, in age four to 18 years. Eighty are boys and 45 girls.

There is a child specialist, to watch the health of the child and a clinic is conducted each Wednesday at the home.

Mr. Flanders told how they want the children in that home to feel that it is not just an institution, but rather their home, where each child could be an individual. They attend public schools and churches, and many of the children are in the orchestra at the Roxborough high school. The young folks enjoy football, baseball, tennis and many other sports, and there are Boy and Girl Scout troops.

The Northern Home for Children is an institution, which by careful selective process, takes under its care those children from broken homes, who are in need of and will benefit by this institutional training. It attempts to surround them with helpful environment of a normal home with understanding parents.

Mr. Flanders said the same needs are recognized as in any good, private home—among them the need for good food, clothing and shelter, the need for encouragement, censure, counsel, the need for social contacts, including playmates, friends and community life, the need for a sense of security, freedom, self development, and self choice, wholesome recreation, good health, education, spiritual training and appreciation. He said these needs are met by programs which include an abundance of health and character-building activities, adequately supervised. By these close contacts, the supervisors come into personal relationship with the children.

PIG ROAST SUPPER

In an effort to improve the service of Bristol's pig roast supper there will be a number of changes in the management of the supper. A fine corps of trained waiters and waitresses has been secured. This is the principal event of the Bethel A. M. E. Church every year. The pastor and officials are asking the public to support the supper. For 39 years this has been one of the main endeavors to carry on the work of providing for the minister of this important work. A number of organizations have been invited to dine in groups. Meet your friends at the St. James's Parish House, Thursday between 5.45 and nine p. m. Get a real old-fashioned dinner—roast pig or chicken, with appropriate accessories.

ONE-CLUB GOLF

There is, it seems, something new in golf, in the English Women's championship, played on the Seacroft course at Skegness there appeared a Miss Gloria Minoprio, a stately lady attired in dark blue trousers and white jumper, with an equipment of one solitary club, a cleveland. With this she proceeded to win 2 and 1 from a Miss Betty Somerville. According to George Greenwood, British writer, it was the first time any player had won a championship match using only one club. In the second round Miss Minoprio was beaten 7 and 6 by Miss Mary Johnson, who subsequently went to the final, in which she in turn was beaten 4 and 3 over the 36-hole route by Miss Phyllis Wade.

The main point in bringing up the subject of Miss Minoprio and her one-club championship endeavor is a reported undercurrent of feeling on the part of some of the golfing leaders on both sides of the Atlantic that the number of clubs allowed individuals, at least in championship play, should be reduced. Chick Evans, winner of both the national amateur and open titles, advanced that idea years ago. Other topnotchers have expressed themselves, in private, as favorable to such a move upon the part of championships authorities.

They feel that a high percentage of individual skill and certainty of judgment has been taken out of the game by this tendency on the part of the manufacturers to provide "a club for every shot." It is easy to understand, from another angle, how many of the professionals would hesitate to back any movement on curtailment. They could see in such a move a curtailment in sales and profits, as well as a greater problem in teaching their pupils the art of scoring in satisfactory figures.

"DAME" IS OUT

Dilittante philosophers, who have at times had the feeling that there was something malapropos in the use of the diminutive "Miss" in certain instances, have been fumbling with what now has become a clearly defined issue of major importance.

Undoubtedly the title "Mrs." connotes maturity and lends a certain dignity which it is only natural single women would covet. But usage has inseparably associated it with marriage, and its indiscriminate use would be confusing and might lead to social complication of an embarrassing nature.

Why not revive the title "Dame"? It is recommended by its original meaning, which is: A female ruler, a superior or head; a form of address originally used to a lady of rank, or a woman of position; the feminine correspondent to Sir.

Only one objection can possibly be raised against this proposal. Tactless persons might use it in addressing young women to whom the diminutive prefix properly belongs and in addressing those girls of uncertain age who imagine themselves still flappers and glory in the diminutive "Miss."

Ex-Mayor Hyman is trying to come back in New York and Big Bill Thompson is champing at the bit in Chicago. Everyone seems accounted for but Bossy Gillis.

"BEACH BEAUTY" by ARTHUR SHUMWAY

SYNOPSIS

Kay Owen, ambitious Daytona Beach girl, is starred in a Community Players amateur show. Earl Harrow, New York theatrical producer, sees her, and thinks she has stage possibilities. Kay explains that financial reverses prevent her from studying art seriously. Harrow offers Kay a secretarial position during his stay in Florida. One night, he entertains Kay and her friends on his yacht, "Commander III." Ida Campbell, Daytona Beach socialite who dabbles in the Players' performances, makes a play for Harrow and wins his interest. Later she invites him to a party at her home, but does not ask Kay. "Spike" Winch, Harrow's press agent and body-guard, invites Kay as his partner, knowing it will pique Ida. Kay accepts.

CHAPTER VII

Ida Campbell appeared from somewhere, clinging to Earl Harrow's arm, "Kay!" she said warmly. "I'm so glad you could get here. I was afraid you wouldn't care to come because of the show tonight, but I'm delighted to see you."

"And I," Earl Harrow said quietly.

Spike was grinning at his employer.

"Howya, Earl?"

"Look," Ida Campbell said, "will you excuse Mr. Harrow and me a minute or two? We're about to run out of ice and I'm on my way up to town to get some."

"I can go," Spike said.

"I wouldn't think of it," Ida replied lightly. "Mr. Harrow and I can take the station wagon."

Of course, Kay was thinking, the servants couldn't possibly go.

Harrow smiled understandingly at Kay and grinned back at Spike, as Ida led him briskly away.

"If you see him again tonight I'll be surprised," Spike commented.

When Ida and Harrow had gone Kay turned to Spike Winch.

"You're right," she said. "I'm afraid we won't see much more of them."

"I've seen that going-for-ice gag used before."

"It serves the purpose," Kay agreed.

She and Winch sat down. He offered her a cigaret from a black and ivory box on the table and lit one of his own stubby cigars. Kay studied him and wondered how far she could trust him. At a time such as this she could not afford to be indiscreet.

"Spike," she said, "tell me something."

"Anything."

"Do you know—well, does Mr. Harrow—is he interested in Ida?"

Spike began to grin. Instantly Kay was afraid she had given herself away. She tried to appear as casual and disinterested as possible.

"This Campbell's a dame," Winch said slowly, studying the cigaret as if it represented a problem. "She's got plenty of what it takes and she soft-soaps the boss. Write your own ticket."

"You mean he is, then, he is interested in her?" Kay laughed. "I rather thought so."

"It probably doesn't come under the head of loyalty," Spike said, "but I'm just telling you: the boss isn't any pushover, but now and then some dame can make him feel pretty important and when his head starts to swell his heart begins to thump—providing, of course—that conditions are right, in general, and that the dame is appealing enough. It all fits together, you see. Now, personally, I know the boss pretty well. His worst time is after somebody's upset his little applecart. And that's just what Carlotta Ves-tra's done. You've heard of Carlotta?"

"Of course!"

"Well, she's over in Europe somewhere and Earl is been walking around New York trying to pluck feathers out of the air. That's the big reason we're down here. So he's in his susceptible stage. Six months from now he's liable to be as hard-boiled and unemotional as a Glasgow banker, but that isn't now, see? This is the rebound. And when he's in the rebound is where I come in."

Kay looked curiously at Winch. The little press agent nodded.

"Earl's a rich man, but if it weren't for the dames he'd be downright filthy with it. They always make trouble for him. And one of my jobs is to see they don't. Let's dance," he concluded, rising.

As Kay moved slowly over the polished floor with Winch, she began to wonder just how much of his recitation had been a direct warning to her. Well, if he had intended it as a warning, he had used faulty psychology, because now she knew that nothing would please her more than to try to get Harrow more interested in her just to pique Winch, if for no other reason. One thing, anyway, was certain: Harrow did have an eye for Ida Campbell.

One hour passed, two, three, and several of the guests had gone, but

"Cab. And what a time we had finding one."

"We got the ice," Ida explained, as she put her shoes on, "and decided to drive back by way of the beach. Such a nice night and the moon. But we'd only come about a mile and the beach was getting so narrow as the tide came in, we decided to turn up at the next approach before the tide was too high, and what happened then but the silly motor began to cough and die and there wasn't a drop left in it."

The laugh came again from the divan, mild, inoffensive, but significant. Kay had all she could do to keep from smiling. She could see that Ida was furious and Harrow, amused. She looked at Spike Winch, remembering what he had been telling her of Harrow's periods of susceptibility, but the little man wore a poker face.

USAGE UP... RATES DOWN

Mr. "Average Customer" buys kilowatt-hours of electricity for his home, just as he buys pounds of sugar and pecks of potatoes. In the year 1925 the average residence customer of this company bought 383 kilowatt-hours, or about 32 per month.

In the year 1933 he bought 645 kilowatt-hours, or about 53.7 per month.

Every year in that period saw an increase in the average use, and every year the average customer paid less per kilowatt-hour than he had paid in the previous year. Both Mr. and Mrs. Customer find there are many ways in which electricity can save them money and add to their comfort.

This constantly increasing use during a period when everyone is spending with the utmost care is the best possible proof of the value of low-priced electricity in the carefully managed home.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

THIS is the week to buy the staple and non-perishable foods needed for Thanksgiving, to order your turkey, to get such tedious tasks as making mincemeat and shelling nuts out of the way. Be sure too, that your spice shelf is adequately stocked with seasoning for stuffings and pumpkin pies. A carefully planned menu and a market list will help simplify your work.

For this week-end simple foods are to be preferred. A pot roast or plain roast of lamb, beef or pork with plain, buttered vegetables and a simple fruit dessert or milk pudding is desirable. Root vegetables and the citrus fruits are inexpensive. Cabbage and spinach and both cooking and eating apples also are low in price.

In place of the very special dinner this week we are including a Thanksgiving menu of seasonal and reasonably priced foods.

Low Cost Dinner

Pot Roast of Beef Potatoes
Carrots Onions
Bread and Butter
Fruit Salad
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Lamb Mashed Potatoes
Cauliflower with Paprika Butter
Bread and Butter
Coffee Gelatin Soft Custard
Tea or Coffee Milk

Thanksgiving Dinner

Fruit Cup or Clear Soup
Celery Salted Nuts Olives
Roast Turkey Nut Stuffing
Giblet Gravy
Mashed Sweet Potatoes Diced Turnips
Cranberry Sauce
Rolls and Butter
Pumpkin or Squash and Mince Pies
Fruit Coffee Nuts

SZABO AND GRABAR TO WRESTLE AT ARENA

TRENTON, Nov. 21—Sandor Szabo versus Henry Graber, that will be the wrestling piece de resistance that Johnny Ipp, will offer mat patrons at the Arena tonight.

The vaunted Hungarian and the blonde German star meet in the two-fall-out-of-three set, 90 minute time limit and as neither man has been defeated on the local mat one of the best bouts of the season is expected.

Graber has climbed steadily from the ranks to achieve the wind-up spot. He has faced such stern opposition as Frank Bronowicz, Wee Willie Davis, Mike Romano, Vanka Zeleznicka and Charlie Allen and none of these matmen have been able to pin him.

Szabo is perhaps the most popular grappler to tread the Arena canvas. His famous "hatch-lock" has projected him into the limelight and his clean sportsmanlike tactics have kept him there.

Both men are clever scientific type of bone-bender and speed and smart wrestling will predominate.

Abe Goldberg, sensational California Hebrew, will tussle with Steve Znoski, Rider College Pole, in the one fall to a finish semi-windup. Earl Wampler, westerner wizard, makes his debut against the popular Henry Piers and another pair of newcomers clash in the other 30 minute contest, Al Bisignano and Tiny Ruff.
